Children's Book Review

Submitted by Waconda Clayworth

Walruses by Charles Rotter

Find out what pinnipeds and vibrissae are. The large photos make you think you are communicating with the walruses not only as they 'haul out' but in all their other activities. This book is part of a cool series that includes dolphins, jellyfish, octopuses, seals, sea otters, and sharks.

Look Inside a Pueblo by Jenny Moss

The Taos Pueblo permitted electricity in the early 1960's. They kept a beautiful if static herd of buffalo near it. The Canadian Habitat for Humanity was modeled on it in the mid 80's. People have lived in it for over 1000 years. This book will simply illustrate many more facets of pueblos' structures. A good way to get started with budding builders is to look inside the other structure wonders: a castle, an igloo, a pyramid, and a teepee.

Meditate with Me A Step-by-Step Mindfulness Journey

Illustrated by Margarita Surnaite

This is a large book of cute drawings with a serious but simple to follow instructions. Meditations for kids? What stress could their carefree lives have? Actually quite a few: tests at school, tests at the doctor, dealing with blended homes, fears of bullies.... And I am sure my readers could name more. Mindfulness is this decade's popular word. It refers to relaxing while blocking out what ails you and letting in good thoughts. Most importantly it means you de-stress, become calmer and happier.
